Risk Disclosure

Before you enter foreign exchange and stock markets, you have to remember that investing/trading currencies and other investment products is trading in nature and always involves a considerable risk. As a result of various financial fluctuations, you may not only significantly increase your capital, but also lose it completely.

Therefore, our clients have to assure Empower Markets that they understand all the possible consequences of such risks, they know all the specifics, rules and regulations governing the use of investment products, including corporate events, resulting in the change of underlying assets. Client understands that there are special risks and features that affect prices, exchange rates and investment products.

These risks include decrease in liquidity, price change, high volatility and circumstances beyond control.

Empower Markets is not liable for any damages that occurred as a result of government restrictions, regulations of foreign exchange or stock markets, military actions, suspension of trading and other circumstances beyond control.
